THE IRON MILLA.

Ere the city's free from slumber Or the sunlight's on the hills, There is heard the broken measure Of the waking of the mills. When the morning mists they sever From the summits gray and pale, And the vapors line the river Likes seet of spreading sail; When the sound of falling hammer Joins the chorus of the wheels There is heard the steady measure Of the voices of the mills.

Of the vulces of the mins.

As the city wakes to labor

And each mart with tradic fills, when we count each passing hour
By the articling of the belies,
Then like sound of failing water
Or the wind among the bilds,
There is heard the steady measure
Of the music of the milis.

When the night is in the valley,
And the clouds obscure the sky;
When the red finnes down the city
In the gloom go piercing high,
Them bright gleans break o'er the waters
And along the dusky hills,
And the red lights shed their lustres
O'er the slumb'ring fron mills.

When we number each bravuras,
And the dark tow're strong and stabl.
Count each castle house of progress:
List the great heart-throbe of trade;
Then the red lights in the valley,
And the smoke that wells the hills
Tell the glory of the city,
Is her giant iron mills.

Dr. R. E. Squibb, of Brooklyn, New York, who has earned an almost reputation as a compounder of Pharmaeutical preparations of exceptional purity, has lately submitted to the Medical ociety of the State of New York, the is proposed. He estimates that the cost of a State Board of Health of the kind deject to Mr. J. J. Gill, that gentleman inscribed in his bill will be about $80,000 a formed us that no strike was in existence; year for New York, "without trusting to that the Eastern men who had been workyear for New York, "without trusting to fines or emoluments to reimburse any part of such cost." At the same time, "by a very rough estimate, based on the manufacturing and mercantile interests of the State, the losses to the population through practices of carelessness and adulteration, through non-competition and greed that the interest of the state of for money-making which such a law is intended to check and finally prevent, cannot be less than $700,000 per annum, though probably much more. Then, assuming the population of the State at five millions, (recently given as 4,995,000,) the loss per capita per annum cannot beless than fourteen cents." The basis for this calculation is given in a categorical form by Dr. Squibb, and shows closely he has examined into the subject in all its scope. He judges of the ex-tent of the adulterations practiced as only an intelligent, observant expert could-an intelligent, observant expert could—first, by the quantity of terra alba and other substances used only for purposes of adulteration which is imported; next, the testimony on record (taken before the Commissioner of Internal Revenue) in regard to the quantities of alcohol used in the manufacture of artificial wines and liquors. Other elements upon which Dr. Squibb bases his calculations are the amount of "faced," damaged, or a "doctored" tea sold in the common markets; the amount sold of damaged and inferior grain; the quality of a large proportion of the bread, milk butter, and cheese sold in the markets; the offal fats used in the manufacture of elementary terated ground coffee and wet and dirty sugars sold, together with the large import trade in low grades of drugs, such as rhu-barb, jalap and other cheap crude materi-als, used chiefly for powdering and adul-terating better grades, and finally the large amount of articles of food and medicine sold below the cost of production from fair materials. An expert like Dr. Squibb can make a very fair estimate from such soin below the cost of particular from fair materials. An expert like Dr. Squibb cau make a very fair estimate from such data as these.

One great iniquity of adulteration is that its worst evils fail upon the poor and needy. The wealthy and educated classes suffer least from adulteration "because they pay high prices for their supplies from good sources," while the poor must buy in small quantities and at the cheapest shops. The various sorts of adulteration practiced are endless, but Dr. Squibb makes a rough grouping of them into classes, which serves for purposes of comparison well enough. Thus he would have the law prohibit and punish the issue of any compound which contains any poisonous or huriful ingredients not publicly stated and professed by the label attached to the compound when offered for sale, as, for example, alum in baking powder, lead in cosmetics, powerful drugs in patent medicines. The offense of adulteration shall consist either in the adding of one or more substances to another or others, whereby the strength, purity, quality or true value of the resulting substance or mixture is reduced, as, for instance, corn meal in flour, chicory in coffee, terra aba in cream of tartar, foreign substances in powdered opium, &c.; the substitution of one substance for an electron of the wind—narmely if the wind.

We have repeatedly advocated the liberal use of manure as a means of dereasing the cost per bushel of our crops and thus proportionately increasing the farmer's profits. As a proof of the correctness of this theory we give the following account of a corn crop for two years under account of a corn crop for two years under the two courses of treatment. As is well known the season of 1876 was little if any more favorable than that of 1875, while that of 1877 is below the average of either. The field contained eight and one-fourth acres of second or third rate land, and the treatment in both cases is clearly shown by the account, which for the crop of 1875 is as follows:

though it would not be for a day or two st least.

On the vacant lot in front of the Acme works the whole force of Eastern men are congregated, their number being about ninety. Singling out one or two of the leaders, we commenced plying them with questions, and soon learned that the cause of the suspension was a demand from the managers that they should make 750 chimneys bereafter for a day's work instead of 600 as formerly. This they claimed they would not be able to do. They were candid in saying that Mr. Gill had notified them a week ahead of the proposed change, and also stating that the men he proposed to employ in their places were willing to work on those terms. There did not seem to be any excitement over the matter, the principal theme of their conversation being as to the best means to adopt to get back to 'their old homes in the East.

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE

SANFURD'S HAUICAL CUME.
A GREAT AND SUCCESSFUL REMEDY.—During the alarming prevalence of Catarrh, it is gratifying to note this success and popularity of Sanford's Radical Cure for Catarrh. From a few brief seasons, attained to the height of popular favor in the extent of its sales and the frequency of its cures. Certainly, no remedy can boast of better references from physicians, druggists, and well-known citizens, who have freely given their testimony in its favor. The fact that physicians' prescriptions for it are to be found on file in many of our best drug stores must create a warm feeling in its favor, and pave the way for its universal use as a standard remedy for Catarrh.—Boston Journal.
